MILS 105. ARMY PHYSICAL READINESS LEADER. (2 Credits)

A leader's level of physical fitness has a direct impact on his/her unit's combat readiness. Countless times during our history, a leader's ability to rally soldiers, instill confidence, alter the course of a battle is derived from his/her leadership. The Army's Physical Readiness Training (APRT) program provides a forum for developing leadership unlike any other physical fitness program. The primary purpose of this course is to enable students to develop their leadership skills by providing them an opportunity to instruct and lead their peers in a controlled environment. Using the APRT program for structure and context, the students will apply the fundamentals of physical fitness to develop a fitness plan, present it to other students, and direct the execution of their plans. Upon the completion of their assignments, students will complete a self-assessment. Evaluations will grade the students' work using the Army's 16 Leadership Dimensions and the self-assessment.
