

SOCIAL JUSTICE IN URBAN EDUCATION CONCENTRATION

Program Overview

Drake University's Social Justice in Urban Education (SJUE) program seeks to educate culturally responsive teachers to work effectively with all students in urban settings—particularly students of color, working-class students, immigrant students, and students from historically marginalized populations. Aligned with the School of Education's commitment to academic reflection, collaborative learning, and social justice, the program seeks to help teachers critically examine urban contexts, so that they may develop pedagogical knowledge and tools to work with students in these contexts.

Program Requirements

Undergraduate students can receive their degree in Elementary Education (K-6) or Secondary Education (5-12) with a Social Justice in Urban Education Concentration.
