

RHETORIC AND MEDIA STUDIES BACHELOR OF ARTS

Program Overview

The program in Rhetoric and Media Studies considers how our use of language and symbols shapes who we and others are, what we may become, and what we do. Courses in the major bring critical attention to the nature of representations and communicative/knowledge practices and how they mediate our lives and experience, with particular attention to the contested and changing character of identity, community, public life, ethics, and morality. Students in the program learn to analyze forms of media from across political, popular, and professional cultures. The major also invites students to understand the movement of social change in a range of settings and to consider how those settings offer differing resources for them to engage in political action in their own lives.

B.A. Degree Requirements

The major prepares students for careers in law and public administration, medicine and public health, activism, social work, advertising and marketing, politics and public policy, business, banking, and consulting, among others. The various courses in the RMS program examine social groups and processes in a wide diversity of contexts, with an emphasis on language, communicative practices, and social justice.

The program is interdisciplinary, including classes in rhetoric, sociology, and anthropology. Students should work with their advisers to assure selection of courses compatible with their educational and career objectives.
